Trainers' and Jockeys' Opinions.

Lakeland Knew He Had a Good One,

I knew I had a good horse, and expected he would be well handled. He was, and he won a good race. The only time during the running that I was really anxious was at the end of the mile. I could see he was good for the rest of the journey, but I noticed, as Hamilton began to ride him, an inclination to swerve. A horse built as he is is bound to swerve under pressure, but lucklyy it was not a very serious one this time, and he did not bother any one. Hornpipe's showing was not up to expectations. My advice to those that asked me was, if you bet on one, bet on the other. He had apparently a lot of speed, but did not stay just as well as I counted he would.

Hamilton Feared the Sulks.

It was a hard race from the start, and I had plenty to do to keep Counter Tenor going. He laid his ears back in the run up the hill, and I thought he was about to sulk, but I kept riding with the reins and he went on all right. Twice in the stretch he acted as though he wanted to quit. At the furlong pole the result seemed very doubtful, but as soon as I saw that Sir Walter was beginning to stop I knew I would win.

ANTHONY HAMILTON.

Race Too Short for St. Maxim. St. Maxim seemed to be running well within himself to the middle of the stretch, when he began to hang. At the end he came on and gained on Counter Tenor and Sir Walter rapidly. If the race had been a furlong, or even half a furlong, further, I would have won. I had a good game horse under me, and he was trained to the minute. SAMUEL DOGGETT.

Sir Walter Ran on His Courage.

Well, I didn't win, but my horse gave me no reason to complain. He ran all the way at a good pace, and was hanging on gamely at the finish. Taral asked me for a whip as he went to the post, but I refused it under order. The horse tried in several races last year to get away from it, and we decided to let him run on his courage. I have no complaints to make of the manner Taral handled him. He followed orders, and we were beaten on our merits. I did, however, think I was second, for it appeared to me as if Counter Tenor only caught him in the last stride, and I can just understand how St. Maxim split them.

Taral Needed a Whip.

If Rollins had given me a whip I think I could have won with Sir Walter. As it was, I was badly handicapped at the finish. I had to commence to ride my horse a quarter of a mile from home, and at the beginning of the last furlong he was nearly all out. I helped him all that I could, but it FRED TARAL

Dorian Is Not a Stayer.

I learned one thing by the race, and that is that my horse does not belong in that lot. He may be a stayer among his class, but this field to-day was too much for him. It was a good race, and as far as he went he satisfied me, but that last furlong was my lesson. In future his bids will be made with sprinters.

Griffin Beaten Early.

I was beaten at the end of the first three furlongs. Dorian evidently I was beaten at the end of the met found the pace too hot, for he quit and wouldn't try.

HENRY GRIFFIN.

Rubicon Did All That Was Asked.

I started Rublcon hoping, of course, to win, but his defeat was no great surprise. He has been doing all I asked of him, and his showing in the race was, I think, up to his work. It was a fast race between a good class of horses, and one can take defeat of this kind without grumbling.

Henry Harris

Quit When Collared.

Rubicon had plenty or speed and seemed to be running well within himself. I thought I would win at the beginning of the last furlong, but at that point Sir Walter collared my horse, and it was all over so far as he was concerned. He quit badly. ALONZO CLAYTON.

Hornpipe Merely a Pacemaker.

I hardly expected to win with Hornpipe, as my instructions were to go out and force the pace for Counter Tenor. For all that my horse ran a great race, and I thought he would have a chance up to the end of the mile. Then he collapsed. JOSEPH HILL.
